the north fork of long island

Believe it or not, there is serious wine being made just 90 minutes from Manhattan.

At the end of Long Island, the land splits into two “forks,” the North and the South, with the North showcasing the majority of grape vines.

Long Island viticulture, when compared to the likes of France, Italy, Germany and even California, is an infant. We need only look back 38 years to find the first significant attempt to make wine, when Alex and Louise Hargrave planted 10,000 vinifera vines in 1973. Fortunately, the hankering for grape juice was fertile, as a little over a quarter of a century later the Long Island wine industry has grown from one small vineyard to 3,000 acres of vines and over thirty wineries.

Between the North and South Forks, the main varietals cultivated are Sauvignon Blanc, Chardonnay, Cabernet Franc, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot. Other attempts are by way of Pinot Blanc, Gewürztraminer, Pinot Noir, Grenache and Syrah. How, might you ask, can the home of the Hamptons create anything notable from the mentioned noble grapes? Simple. The cultivating wine community of Long Island are impassioned farmers. They tend meticulously to their land, respecting their vineyards to fashion fruit that speaks of the berry, and not of the hand of the maker. Additionally, Long Island winemakers can credit time spent working many harvests in Burgundy, Bordeaux, Tuscany and Napa. Such experiences have granted them the insight and skill to achieve similar success at home.

With increased attention being given to the value of locally sourced produce and protein, why not offer that same awareness to your grape juice? Preconceptions aside, it's time to give our local boys and girls a shot.
